Downing-Street, Auguſt 30, 1796.

THE Letters, of which the following are Copies, have been received from Colonel Craufurd by the Right Honorable Lord Grenville, His Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Head Quarters of His Royal Highneſs the Archduke Charles of Auſtria, Mettingen, Auguſt 12, 1796.

My Lord,

I Have the Honour to inform your Lordſhip, that the Archduke marched on the 9th Inſtant with the Main Army from Nordlingen, and took a Poſition acroſs the Eger Rivulet, with his Right towards Allerſheim, the Center in Point of Mettingen, where the Head Quarters were fixed, and his Left towards Hohenaltheim, for the Purpoſe of covering more effectually the Roads from Nordlingen and Ottingen to Donawert. The Corps which had been poſted at Nerſheim, under General Hotze, had already fallen back to Forſheim and Aufhauſen, to keep up the direct Communication with that on the Left Bank of the Danube, commanded by General Rieſe, who was now encamped near Dillingen. General Wartenſleben had moved in the mean Time to Forckheim, on the River Rednitz, and from thence to Lauf on the Pegnitz. General Frolich, the Prince of Condé, and General Wolf, remained nearly in the ſame Poſition as mentioned in my Diſpatch of the 4th.

The Enemy attacked the Auſtrian Guards of General Hotze and Rieſe on the 8th; but, by a Diſplay of much Skill and Firmneſs, the firſt of thoſe Generals managed to loſe ſo little Ground, that the Change of Poſition, which was ordered for the next Day, took Place without Interruption; and the latter, from his Situation being more advantageous, completely repulſed the Attack that was made upon him.

On the 9th at Night Information was received that the Prince of Condé had been obliged to retire to Mindenheim, on the Mindel, and General Wolf into the Defile of Bregentz, where, however, he had poſted himſelf in ſuch a Manner as to check the Enemy's Manœuvre in that Quarter. General Wartenſleben alſo reported, that his Poſition was ſo bad as to make it highly imprudent for him to await the Attack which General Jourdan, from his late Movements, ſeemed to be meditating; and the ſame Day General Moreau arrived in great Force oppoſite the Center of His Royal Highneſs's extenſive Line, forming with his Left on the Heights of Umenheim, his Center in Point of Catzenſtein, and his Right on the Heights of Dunſtelkingen and Deſchingen, with a Corps to cover this Flank near Laningen, on the Danube. His Reſerve was between Nerſheim and Konigſbron.

On the 10th the Enemy advanced a ſtrong Part of their firſt Line into the Woods in their Front, where they eſtabliſhed themſelves firmly, and the ſame Evening, about Six o'Clock, they attacked General Hotze's Left, at Eglingen and Amerdingen, with great Impetuoſity. They ſucceeded in driving back his Advanced Poſts, but they made no Impreſſion on his Left Poſition, nor did they interrupt the Attack that His Royal Highneſs intended to make upon them the next Morning, of which the following was the Diſpoſition.

An Advanced Guard, commanded by Prince John of Lichtenſtein, ſupported by a ſmall Corps under General Staray, was to march from the Camp of Mettingen along the Road that leads from Nordlingen to Nerſheim, and endeavour, by manœuvering to the Enemy's Left Flank, to diſlodge them from the Heights of Umenheim. The Reſt of the Main Army was to aſſemble at Foreheim, Aufhauſen, and Amerdingen, from whence it was to march in Three Columns; that of the Right under General Hotze; that of the Center under the Prince of Furſtenberg; and the Left under General de la Tour, and attack the Enemy's Center and Right, whilſt General Rieſe, ſtrengthened by Part of General Frolich's Corps, drove them from the Neighbourhood of Laningen, and and marched towards Giengen and Haydenheim, in order to come into the Rear of General Moreau's Position. This latter Movement was to be covered on it's Right by a ſmall intermediate Corps under General Mercantin, who was to preſerve the Communication between General Rieſe and the Main Army. As the Enemy had a great Superiority of Numbers, it was reſolved to attack by Surprize, and for this Purpoſe the Marches were ſo arranged, that the Columns were to be formed on the different Points, from whence they were to advance, juſt before Day-Break, and proceed immediately. However, a moſt violent Storm, which laſted ſeveral Hours, made the Night ſo extremely dark, and the Roads ſo bad, that the Troops and Artillery were above double the Time they otherwiſe would have been in performing their Movements, and therefore the Attack was neceſſarily deferred till Seven o'Clock. This enabled the Enemy to diſcover the whole Plan, and prepare for their Defence.

Notwithſtanding ſo unfortunate a Circumſtance, which deprived the Archduke of the great Advantage of Surprize, His Royal Highneſs perſevered in his Reſolution. The Three Columns of the Center were ſucceſsful in diſlodging the Enemy's Advanced Guard from the Woods, and they drove it back to the Heights of the principal Poſition; but the Column that marched towards Umenheim finding itſelf taken in Flank by General Moreau's Reſerve, which had advanced for that Purpoſe as ſoon as the Affair commenced, was obliged to retire. This laid General Hotze's Right Flank open, and forced him alſo to fall back to the Poſition of Foreheim, from whence he had marched in the Morning; but the Prince of Furſtenberg and General La Tour maintained their Advantages. Juſt as the Archduke was making his Diſpoſitions for ſtrengthening and bringing forward his Right again, he received a Report from General Wartenſleben, purporting that he was obliged to retire to Amberg; and that a Column of General Jourdan's Army had already arrived at Nuremberg, for the Purpoſe of co-operating immediately with General Moreau. His Royal Highneſs now judged, that even if victorious on this Point he would probably ſtill be obliged to retreat to Donawert, by the Movements that the Enemy were making on his Right, and, ſhould he be ſo unfortunate as to experience a Defeat, the Conſequences from the ſame Reaſon, might be moſt diſaſtrous. He therefore ſuſpended his Attack, and contented himſelf with remaining Maſter of the principal Part of the Field of Battle; a Deciſion however taken with the utmoſt Reluctance, becauſe General Rieſe had ſucceeded to the Extent of his moſt ſanguine Hopes, and had advanced, about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon, nearly to Haydenheim.

The Auſtrians loſt on this Occaſion from 12 to 1500 Men. The French Loſs in killed and wounded is eſtimated at above 2000, beſides more than 1200 Priſoners are already brought in, Four Pieces of Cannon, and ſeveral Ammunition Waggons.

This Morning the whole Army of His Royal Highneſs has taken exactly the ſame Poſition that it had on the 10th.

I have the Honor to be, &c.

Head Quarters of His Royal Highneſs the Archduke Charles of Auſtria, Donawert, Auguſt 14, 1796.

My Lord,

I Have the Honour to inform your Lordſhip, that the Archduke marched with his Main Army to this Place on the 13th, where he was joined by Generals Hotze and Rieſe. The Enemy did not attempt to interrupt this Movement, though it was made in the Day, nor have they advanced ſince, which is a convincing Proof that the Affair of the 11th checked very materially their intended Plan of Operations.

The Paſs of Bregentz continues to be defended by General Wolf, and that of Freuſſen will be covered by General La Tour's Left.

I have the Honor to be, &c.
